To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to provide my wholehearted support and recommendation for Kansarmen Sri Lanka Foundation (KSLF), a Negombo-based non-profit organization dedicated to improving access to water, sanitation and hygiene for deprived communities.

As project advisor for Wilde Ganzen Foundation that is based in the Netherlands, I have had the privilege of collaborating with Kansarmen Sri Lanka Foundation over the past three years, and I am continually impressed by their commitment, professionalism, and the impactful work they perform in some of the most underserved communities in Sri Lanka. KSFL has developed and implemented a range of innovative projects that not only provided essential WASH infrastructure but have also addressed the broader challenges faced by the communities they serve. In addition to their WASH initiatives, Kansarmen SL Foundation conducts impactful awareness programs, training sessions, and advocacy efforts. These activities are designed to educate and mobilize communities, ensuring that the benefits of their work extend far beyond infrastructure alone.

Moreover, Kansarmen SL Foundation plays a crucial role in supporting schools and communities to enhance leadership, foster a spirit of volunteerism, and promote gender inclusivity and equity. They are dedicated to increasing community engagement in social work and empowering individuals to claim their human rights. This holistic approach ensures that their projects are sustainable and that the communities continue to thrive long after the initial interventions.

The Foundation's commitment to transparency is equally commendable. They provide detailed financial documentation, demonstrating responsible management of the funds entrusted to them. This level of transparency builds trust with donors and partners, ensuring that resources are used effectively to make a meaningful impact.

We are particularly proud of Kansarmen SL Foundation’s achievement in maintaining 99% sustainability across their completed projects. This remarkable success is a testament to their strategic planning, community involvement, and unwavering dedication to creating lasting change.

I wholeheartedly endorse Kansarmen SL Foundation and their mission. Their work is not only vital but also transformative, providing much-needed hope and support to some of the most vulnerable communities in Sri Lanka. I am confident that with continued support, they will be able to expand their reach and impact even further. Please feel free to contact me if you require any additional information.

Sincerely,

Marit van Liere
